Appendix B: Survey Methodology

The North Carolina Social Innovation Survey was designed to assess the social practices of firms in the US state of North Carolina. The state does not collect email addresses with business licenses so no comprehensive electronic mailing list exists, prohibiting a random sample. Instead, fourteen distribution lists were compiled, creating a sample with statewide distribution. Nine had a statewide distribution while five were region-specific. Four lists were across firm structures, five were specific to for-profit firms, four to hybrids, and one to nonprofits. Three of the hybrid lists were populations of cooperatives, L3Cs, and B-corps. The mailing lists used to distribute the survey were a mix of proprietary (seven) and publicly compiled (seven) to provide geographic, firm structure, and industry variation.

An email with information and a link to the survey was sent to the lists. Three reminders were sent every two weeks. All survey links opened and closed on the same day. The survey was web-based and managed in Qualtrics to provide anonymity and confidentiality. No incentives were offered for completion. Response rates by list ranged from six to 43 percent. Both extremes were statewide for-profit lists. The majority of lists had response rates between fifteen and 30 percent with an overall average of 21 percent.

The survey consisted of 25 multiple choice or short answer questions and took approximately fifteen minutes. The first section collected information on organizations’ demographics. Cooperatives, L3Cs, and nonprofits were shown a subset of structure-specific questions. The second section asked about economic conditions and firm performance. Next, the survey collected information on the organization's environmental, community, and employment practices. The final section asked about the firm's mission and industry. Advanced skip patterns eliminated irrelevant questions for respondents. The survey was pre-tested with a group of researchers and practitioners representing different organization types.

While the survey has broad response from across the state and organization types, the sample is not perfectly representative. Specifically, there were no responses from eleven of the one-hundred counties in North Carolina. All of these eleven were rural counties. Panel A of Table B1 shows the distribution of survey and state firms by geographic measures. The survey represents half-a-percent of the total number of establishments with employees in the state with an over-sampling of rural and Tier 1 firms and under sampling of dense-urban firms. Regarding structure, in 2014 for-profits represented 78.5 percent of all establishments in the state, while nonprofits were 21.4 percent. Formal hybrids (cooperatives and L3Cs) represent 0.04 percent. The survey sample oversamples hybrid firms: for-profits make up 68 percent of respondents, nonprofits 26.5 percent, and hybrids 5.4 percent.

Panels B and C of Table B1 compares the state and survey data on personnel. The survey under samples very small firms and oversamples very large firms. The survey is comparably representative of female and minority-run firms. Panel D compares industry distribution. The distribution of private establishments in the states is fairly consistent with the survey sample. The most significant exception is that manufacturing firms are over-represented in the survey. However, the survey allowed for multiple industries to be selected.

There are limitations in the survey analysis from self-selection and possible non-response bias of firms that do not identify with providing social practices. Since the survey was only distributed through email and available online, some possible respondents that lack internet access were unable to respond. This is a limitation of all internet-based surveys. Additionally, the survey is at risk for survival-bias by only collecting information on organizations in operation.

Table B1: Comparison of State Population to Survey Sample

| Panel A: Firm Location | Survey Sample | State Population |
| :--- | :--- | :--- |
| Rural County | $52 \%$ | $33 \%$ |
| Suburban County | $27 \%$ | $24 \%$ |
| Dense Urban County | $20 \%$ | $43 \%$ |
| Tier 1 County | $27 \%$ | $12 \%$ |
| Tier 2 County | $25 \%$ | $32 \%$ |
| Tier 3 County | $46 \%$ | $56 \%$ |
| Observations | 1,195 | 234,686 |
| Share of Population Sampled | $0.51 \%$ |  |

Notes: Table shows distribution of firm locations by population density and economic distress ratings; State population data refers to the number of establishments with employees in the state; establishment refers to store fronts and is not number of unique firms; state data is from AccessNC.
