SCENARIO INSTRUCTIONS & WRITING PROMPTSScenarios Studies 1a & 1b*Instructions Imagine Self Condition:

In the next part of the study you will be asked to imagine several scenarios resulting from a night out. Please immerse yourself in the details of each scenario and think about how you would think or feel in this situation. Please imagine that YOU are describing the events to a friend the next day.

Instructions Imagine Friend Condition:

In the next part of the study you will be asked to imagine several scenarios resulting from a night out. Please immerse yourself in the details of each scenario and think about how you would think or feel in this situation. Please imagine that YOUR FRIEND is describing the events to you the next day.

Scenario 1 (Both Intoxicated, Full Memory)

“Last night I went to a club with some friends from uni. It was so much fun. The music was really great and I started dancing with this hot guy called John. We were both so drunk! I completely lost count of how many drinks we both had. But he was really nice. It got a bit later and we decided to go back to his for another drink. We started kissing in his kitchen, and the next thing I knew, we were going hot and heavy in his bed. I hope we didn’t wake his neighbours.”

Scenario 2 (Both Intoxicated, No Memory)

“I decided to go out to the pub with some mates from work. While I was waiting at the bar for another drink, this guy Tom started chatting me up. Before I knew it, we were both so drunk-I’m afraid to look at how much I spent on drink! I must have agreed to go back to his because I woke up in his bed the next morning. It's been a while since I've had sex with someone. At least he was hot I guess.”

Scenario 3 (Woman Intoxicated, Full Memory)

“I went for dinner with some friends after work. We ended up bumping into my friend’s co-workers. One of them, Sean, was a right hotty. I was so excited that he was chatting me up that I totally lost count of how much I was drinking and got really, really drunk. Sean invited me back to his place, and we were all over each other. I haven’t had sex in a long time. It was kind of awkward this morning because I realised Sean only had 1 or 2 drinks all night.”

Scenario 4 (Woman Intoxicated, No Memory)

“I was at a mate’s party and it was lit! I was having a really great time. At one point this really fit guy, Dan, started talking to me. I was SO drunk I don’t even remember what we were talking about. Hopefully I didn’t make a total fool of myself because Dan only had 1 or 2 drinks. I couldn’t believe it when I woke up in his bed the next morning and realised we had sex the night before—I don’t even remember leaving the party.”

Scenario Study 2

“I decided to go out to the pub with some mates from work. While I was waiting at the bar for another drink, this guy Tom started chatting me up. Before I knew it, we were both so drunk-I’m afraid to look at how much I spent on drink! I must have agreed to go back to his because I woke up in his bed the next morning. It's been a while since I've had sex with someone. [I can't stop thinking about what we might have done. It makes me a bit sick to my stomach.] At least he was hot I guess.”

Writing Prompt Study 3

First-person Perspective:

In this study, we are interested in the different types of sexual experiences people have had in their lives. In the next part of the study we would like you to write about the worst sexual experience you have ever had with a romantic partner. Please try to immerse yourself in the details of the experience. When writing about this experience, please refer to yourself in the first person (e.g., "I did this; I felt this way").

Distanced Perspective:

In this study, we are interested in the different types of sexual experiences people have had in their lives. In the next part of the study we would like you to write about the worst sexual experience you have ever had with a romantic partner. Please try to immerse yourself in the details of the experience. When writing about this experience, please refer to yourself in the third person (e.g., "Mary did this; she felt this way"). In order to preserve confidentiality, you may use the names "Mary and James" when referring to yourself and your partner.
